

Capsule Summary
SM-405
Tippett Outbuilding
Ridge
Private

Circa 1880 - 1900

This structure is significant as an interesting outbuilding with a fairly well-preserved interior. Its original use remains unclear, although the interior finishes suggest a residential or office use. No structures contemporary with the outbuilding remain standing or are known to have stood on site.

According to the current owner, this structure was originally located at the Point Lookout Prison Camp. Currently, there is no evidence to support the building's provenance as a surviving structure from the Point Lookout Prison Camp. It is possible that this structure was a summer cottage or an outbuilding associated with a cottage originally located on Point Lookout.

The Tippet Outbuilding is located at the end of a private drive off of Route 5 near the village of Ridge in St. Mary's County, Maryland. This small, one-room building stands next to a modern rancher. It faces east with the principal gable oriented on an east/west axis.

The north, south, and east sides of the structure are sheathed with board and batten siding held in place by wire nails. The west side is covered with weatherboards. Underneath this siding is a wooden frame held together with cut nails. The gable roof was originally covered with cedar shake shingles which have been replaced with asphalt shingles. The foundation consists of cinderblock piers.

The east (main) elevation is pierced by a centrally placed, partially glazed entrance door. The door was added around 1970. A plain eave board finishes this gable end elevation.

The south and north elevations are lit by one two-over-two sash window. These windows were originally 58.5" by 48.5," but were reduced in size for these replacement two-over-two sash windows.

The west elevation is sheathed with weatherboard siding which replaced an earlier layer of siding in the 1940s. A twentieth century exterior brick chimney is centered on this elevation.

The interior of the one-room structure has a wide plank floor. A built-in corner cupboard stands against the northwest corner of the room. The blue, coved ceiling is especially interesting. The interior is currently being used for storage.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

This structure is significant as an interesting outbuilding with a fairly well-preserved interior. Its original use remains unclear, although the interior finishes suggest a residential or office use. No structures contemporary with the outbuilding remain standing or are known to have stood on site.

According to the current owner, this structure was originally located at the Point Lookout Prison Camp. He had understood that it was moved to its current location by Mrs. Mary W. Jones, known locally as "Aunt Pigeon," who had been a cook at the camp. Supposedly, she had purchased the property on which it now stands for $2.00 an acre, and moved the structure there to serve as her dwelling house.

The St. Mary's County Land Records do not show that Mary W. Jones, or her husband Peter, ever purchased property in the area of this structure. The St. Mary's County Census of 1870 shows the Jones residing with the Henry C. Clark household. Currently, there is no evidence to support the building's provenance as a surviving structure from the Point Lookout Prison Camp.

It is possible that this structure was a summer cottage or an outbuilding associated with a cottage originally located on Point Lookout. These cottages, known locally as "lorettos," were built around the turn of the century. It is also possible that this structure was built as an office for Samuel Raleigh who purchased the property in 1914. Raleigh mentions his office property in his will of 1922.
